

I Want To Know More

Tandi Perkins, Alaska Conference

*Tandi Perkins
Director of Development*

Tandi Perkins joined the Alaska Conference team in early 2018. Her primary focus is creating awareness and financial support for Arctic Mission Adventure.

I met Tami and Ben* at a sandwich shop, as we lamented being stranded in the Anchorage airport. They wore the tired, ragged air of people who had spent the last four days at the airport. I sat across from them as they finished the last of the soup they were sharing, the whiff of alcohol escaping with every bite. I had nothing to complain about with my two-hour delay compared to their long ordeal in getting back home to St. Mary's, a small village in bush Alaska. Over time, lamenting turned to inquiry as they asked about me. They thought I was a teacher, then a health care worker. I explained that I was heading to Dillingham for our church camp meeting. They stared blankly at me. I shared that I had just moved to Alaska to work for the Seventh-day Adventist (SDA) Church to build awareness of the challenges Native Alaskans face and to provide support for the mission program. I could tell my message fell on deaf ears. Tami's face dropped and her countenance darkened once she found out I was "church people" while Ben assured me that they were religious. With her head still bowed, Tami whispered that the church people don't come around very often in St. Mary's. I felt shallow, a green do-gooder that clearly was disconnected with these people.

In that moment, I decided to show my vulnerability. I looked at them with as much love as I could muster and asked, "Life is so hard, isn't it?" Tami lifted her head and looked hard into my eyes. I told them that we are put on this earth to lift each other up; to encourage and love those like Christ loved us. Christ came into this world and didn't judge anyone. He found those that needed to be loved and accepted them; He put His arms around them and held them. I said that is what I believe, that is what my church believes in and that is why I am here—to share what Christ has done in my life. As tears streamed down their faces, Tami replied, "I want to know more".

Suddenly a woman's voice came over the airport intercom announcing that my flight was boarding. As I stared into the eyes of the couple in front of me, dark with the haze of alcohol, hopelessness and despair familiar to many Alaskans, I felt helpless. With over 230 villages in Alaska, our Bible workers are only present in just a handful of communities and the village of St. Mary's is not one. I asked if I could pray with them and reached for their hands. I asked God to reach down and hold these precious souls; to love them and direct them in the way that He would have them go. We said our goodbyes as Tami wiped her tears and I headed to the gate.

From my window seat on the plane, Tami's words kept ringing in my ears: "I want to know more". My mind travelled to Acts 16:9: "That night Paul had a vision: A man from Macedonia in northern Greece was standing there, pleading with him, "Come over to Macedonia and help us!" My interaction with Tami and

Science Saturday Weekend

Christina Waite, Bethel Church

It's a typical cold February weekend in Nome Alaska, but the excitement of over 40 children warms the room as they sing, dance, clap and conduct science experiments about God. Nome SDA Church hosted it's 2018 camp meeting and for the first time, featured a Science Saturday weekend for the kids of Nome.

The Nome church and the local community center joined together to bring captivating object lessons about God through fun science experiments. Science is God-inspired and it's a lot of fun! So why not tap into a child's natural curiosity to help them discover fascinating scientific facts—while at the same time grow their understanding of biblical truths?

The weekend started at the Nome Boys & Girls Club where the children were given dinner and then walked over as a group to the XYZ Senior Center for the evening program. The children were greeted by Ben and Julie Bacon, a lovely couple from Apopka Florida, who leads out in their church's children ministry program. The Bacons taught the children fun songs and dances about God's love and strength.

Next, the children sat down to listen to an interactive Bible story from Pastor Tobin Dodge about how God used musical instruments, along with His faithful servants, to bring down His enemies. The children went on to make their own musical instruments from everyday household items which they then used to sing along with Ben and Julie.

The next day the children were introduced to how the lungs work when playing instruments. Julie Bacon had on display sheep lungs for the children to observe as we pumped air into them. The room was filled with laughter and "ew" as the kids watch us inflate and deflate the lungs. As they touched and observed the lungs we discussed the importance of keeping our lungs healthy and how God gave us lungs for various things from breathing to singing and playing instruments.

As the children finished their day making more instrument crafts, we joined together for one last praise and worship as Ben and Julie Bacon sang songs about God. Science Saturday is a wonderful program that helped the children of Nome learn about how much God plays a big role in their lives and how He has great plans for them. Please continue to keep this ministry and the children of Nome in your prayers as we press forward to bring the love of God to this generation.

Bristol Bay Camp Meeting

Zalika Bishop, Anchorage Community Church

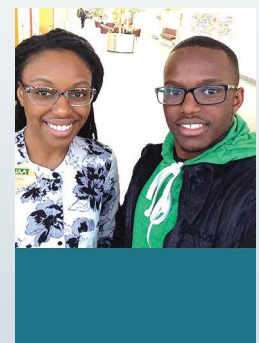

The Bristol Bay Camp Meeting, held in Dillingham Alaska, was a wonderful success. People from all over the area came together for a weekend of growth and Christian fellowship. David Shin, pastor of the Anchorage Hillside O'Malley Church, spoke each day covering topics of being filled by the spirit, praying for the spirit, and spiritual leadership. The rest of the weekend was filled with good food and a program for the youth.

A team prepared food for every meal that weekend and all those who attended enjoyed it each time. Not only was the food delicious, the team was very kind and hospitable as well. The team included Prunie Shade, Wendi Kannenberg, Theresa Breeden, Verity Downs, and Lilly Chuchwuck who put a lot of effort into preparing the meals and it showed.

My brother Balogun and I spent the majority of our time with the youth, the majority of which were from Togiak. During camp meeting, they learned about Nehemiah and how he started rebuilding the city walls of Jerusalem. They learned that Nehemiah held the trusted position of cup bearer to King Artaxerxes. The king noticed that something was wrong with Nehemiah and ultimately gave him permission to return to Judah so that Nehemiah could begin rebuilding the city of Jerusalem. As the youth continued to learn about Nehemiah, they participated in various activities including singing, games, and playing in the gym. On the last night, the group enjoyed a special trip to the local store before leaving for home the next day.

Camp meeting ended with breakfast and a morning devotion led by Pastor Steve Huey, Natives Ministries Director for the North Pacific Union Conference. Later that day, as my brother and I headed back to Anchorage, we were so thankful that we were able to be a part of this experience and help others to know more about Jesus.

Growing Young!

Loruama Neufeldt, Anchorage Samoan Church

As a pastor's wife, it deeply concerns me to see so many of our young people leaving the church. I have asked myself, "Why are our teenagers and young adults leaving our churches?" Growing up, I always heard that the young people are the future of the Adventist church. However, if they are leaving, what does that mean for the next generation of Adventists? The challenge is real and must be dealt with, but in order to address this issue, we must seek to know and understand the root of the problem.

I was fortunate to be part of our church team that attended the "Growing Young Summit" in California led by one of the prominent Christian institutions which contains a Youth Institute. The institute has done extensive research on this issue and have identified key concerns that young people have about their communities of faith:

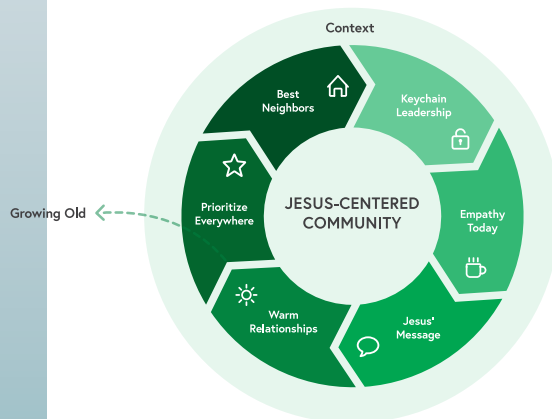

- Leadership positions are often given to the same people in the church who are usually senior members, therefore centralizing authority. Young people would like to see peers in various leadership roles thus decentralizing authority and empowering others, especially teenagers and young adults.
- Young people would like to see more empathy from leaders and senior members in the church instead of judgement or criticism. Perhaps leaders and older members could try stepping into the shoes of the younger generation.
- Instead of simply talking about how much young people matter, look for creative ways to tangibly support and involve them in all facets of our congregations.

In our local church, I'm happy to share that we have addressed some of the concerns, i.e. appointing young people to leadership positions and teaching our youth how to be good neighbors, but we have a long way to go. Cultivating young people is a continual process and my prayer is that we as a church develop vigorous and healthy ways to achieve the goal of retaining our younger members—the future of the SDA church.

Loruama Neufeldt

The 6 Core Commitments of Churches Growing Young

Unlock keychain leadership:
Instead of centralizing authority, empower others—especially young people.

Empathize with today's young people:
Instead of judging or criticizing, step into the shoes of this generation.

Take Jesus' message seriously:
Instead of asserting formulaic gospel claims, welcome young people into a Jesus-centered way of life.

Fuel a warm community:
Instead of focusing on cool worship or programs, aim for warm peer and intergenerational friendships.

Prioritize young people (and families) everywhere:
Instead of giving lip service to how much young people matter, look for creative ways to tangibly support, resource, and involve them in all facets of your congregation.

Be the best neighbors:
Instead of condemning the world outside your walls, enable young people to neighbor well locally and globally.

Kevin Miller

“It’s almost midnight, our small band lean in close to talk of the day’s activities and the many answered prayers. In a land where the gospel is almost forgotten and the cares of this world hold sway, there are still those who have not forgotten God’s call to missions.”

-Beth Wainwright

Twenty two-year old Beth Wainwright perished in a plane crash while serving her Lord after just completing Vacation Bible School, along with three other Bible workers, in Shungnak, Alaska. Beth had lovingly given her heart to the work she did for Christ and the people in bush Alaska. Her only regret was that God had not called her earlier.

June 30: Arctic Mission Adventure Special Offering

Only 11 of 230 Alaska villages have mission workers dedicated to bringing the gospel of Christ to Native Alaskans. With your help, the Alaska Conference can continue to support current workers and add numbers in new villages. Your offering will keep parsonages operating and Bible workers bringing church to rural Alaska.

Called To Missions

Charlie Meigs, Bi-Vocational Pastor—Wrangell

Camp Meeting is a time to connect and grow with God and other Christians. Often, I get too busy with my daily life and forget to slow down and make time to spend with God. When I am away from my daily routine and out in nature, it can be easier to connect with Him. I feel like there are even more distractions for young adults today and making that commitment to stay focused on God is difficult. This is what is so great about camp meetings! It provides time to get away from the distractions of life and focus on your relationship with God. I find that getting involved in my church's local ministries also helps me to grow closer to God.

This year at the Southeast Alaska Camp Meeting the focus is on young adults with the theme "Called to Missions". God has a mission for each of us, whether it's in your home church or on the other side of the world. Everyone has a part, whether it is helping by praying, being hands on or giving financially. This year we want to share and learn from others who are doing outreach in their local churches. Remember that if God calls you to do his work he will give you the tools, strength and courage to accomplish the job.

We have some great speakers this year at SE Alaska Camp Meeting and we are also looking forward to some great group discussions! We would love for you to join us and share your mission ideas. Southeast Alaska Camp Meeting will be August 3rd through August 5th. For more information follow us on Facebook, SDA Southeast Alaska Camp Meeting or you can contact the Wrangell SDA Church at 907-874-3039.
